Federal Jury Convicts Magna Drug Dealer

By Dawn House
Tribune Staff Writer

A federal jury deliberated 15 minutes Wednesday before convicting a Magna man on drug charges after two junior high school students found his day planner containing drug deals and his address on their way to school.

Joseph B. Kelsey, 35, was convicted of possession of cocaine and marijuana with intent to distribute and carrying a loaded .22 caliber pistol in a drug-trafficking crime.

He faces up to 20 years in prison on the drug conviction and a mandatory 5-year prison term on the firearms charge at his sentencing before U.S. District Judge David Winder on Nov. 20.

Prosecutor Ann Stirba said Kelsey was arrested after two junior high school students found his day planner on their way to West Lake Junior High School in West Valley City last October.

"The kids were upset," she said. "They thought the planner had something to do with drugs."

The students turned over Kelsey's day planner, which also contained his driver's license and current home address, to their junior high school principal, who called police.

A search warrant was executed after police watched at least 12 individuals go into Kelsey's Magna home "for brief periods of time and other suspicious activities going on."

The West Valley SWAT team and members of Metro Narcotics Strike Task Force found drug paraphernalia in Kelsey's home. As they were leaving the scene, Kelsey drove up.

Police then found cocaine in Kelsey's pockets, and more drugs, a pistol and another day planner in his car, said Ms. Striba.

"The second day planner contained drug records showing names of clients and accounts owed," she said. "His records were rather complete."

Kelsey also had a loaded .22 caliber semi-automatic pistol with an extra clip and extra rounds of ammunition, she said.

The two-day trial concluded Wednesday, when the five-woman seven-man jury returned guilty verdicts after deliberating 15 minutes.

Kelsey admitted dealing in drugs, but he claimed a friend named J.J. had loaned him the weapon, which he didn't intend to use. "The jury disagreed," said Ms. Stirba.

Kelsey was indicted last October on two counts of possession with intent to distribute cocaine and marijuana and carrying a firearm in a drug-trafficking crime.

Boaters Face Drug Paraphernalia Charges

DUTCH JOHN, Daggett County (UPI) — Two men involved in a Labor Day weekend boating accident on northeastern Utah's Flaming Gorge Reservoir have been charged with possession of drug paraphernalia, lawmen said Wednesday.

The 18-foot boat "ran into the canyon wall going about 25 to 30 mph" Sept. 1, said Bill Solawetz of the state Parks and Recreation Division. "They didn't come close to missing the wall."

Brett H. Kemp, 27, Layton, and Chad R. Roberts, 28, Kaysville, both were charged with possession of drug paraphernalia. And Kemp, who was operating Roberts' boat, was charged with boating under the influence, Solawetz said.

Kemp was released on $1,300 bail pending an arraignment in 8th Circuit Court. Roberts was freed without posting bond, Solawetz said.

The suspects were water skiing with two others in the Hideout Canyon area, about 20 miles south of the Utah-Wyoming state line, when the boat plowed into the rocky beach.

"The front 3 feet of the boat was destroyed," Solawetz said, and the impact ripped off the deck, causing up to $5,000 damage to the craft.

Roberts was water skiing behind the boat and let go of the rope before the impact. Kemp suffered only minor injuries, Solawetz said, but the other two passengers were taken to a Green River, Wyo., hospital, where they were treated for injuries and released.

Kin of Mixed-Blood Utes Sue for Tribal Rights

By Dawn House
Tribune Staff Writer

People of Ute ancestry filed suit Wednesday, asking to be restored to the Ute Indian Tribe to acquire all land, mineral, oil and welfare benefits given to full-blooded Utes on the sprawling Uintah and Ouray Indian Reservation.

The civil lawsuit, filed in U.S. District Court, seeks to cancel the Ute Termination Act, separating 490 so-called mixed-blooded Utes from the tribe.

The 1954 act recognized that people of Ute ancestry have rights equivalent to those of full bloods, but the law would not allow those rights to be passed on to mixed bloods' descendants.

The act has spawned a long-standing conflict between full-blooded members of the Ute Tribe and mixed bloods, including at least three other lawsuits pending in federal court.

Plaintiffs in the latest lawsuit are Lawanna Tabee, Cordie Maez, Roselda Jones, descendants of Robert G. Burson, a mixed blood. They ask that children of similar Ute ancestry "too numerous to mention" be included in a class action suit.

Defendants in the suit are Manuel Lujan, U.S. Interior Secretary, and Lewis Sullivan, of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

Children of mixed-blooded Utes lost land, mineral, oil, water, timber and grazing rights when their parents were separated from the Ute Indian Nation, the suit claims. In addition, descendants were not given welfare benefits or tax-exempt status allowed full-blooded Utes, nor were they provided adequate education.

The Interior Department had "available information" that mixed-blooded Utes were "not capable of managing the affairs and responsibilities that would be placed upon them," when they were terminated from the tribe, according to the suit.

As a result, Ute descendants "have endured great mental anguish, suffering, confusion and loss of enjoyment of life."

The act gave mixed bloods 28 percent of tribal assets that could be divided, and it stipulated that the Ute Tribe and a representative of the mixed bloods should jointly manage assets that could not be divided, such as future royalties from gas, oil and mineral rights.

But the suit claims that mixed bloods do not have full voting rights in the Ute Development Corporation, formed in 1958 to manage mix bloods' assets on the Uintah and Ouray Reservation, sprawled across Wasatch, Duchesne and Unitah counties.

The 10-count complaint seeks to restore descents of mixed bloods to membership in the Ute Tribe, and damages to be determined at trial.

In 1954 Congress gave 490 people identified as mixed bloods a share in tribal assets, including water rights and access on the reservation to fish and hunt. But only 369 surviving people from the original 490 qualify as mixed bloods today, according to court documents.

Another lawsuit pending in federal court was filed in October 1989 after Charles Denver, a mixed blood from Roosevelt, was issued a ticket by a Ute Tribe officer for elk hunting on the reservation with his two adults sons.

Mr. Denver maintains that the regulation allowing mixed bloods to hunt only with their spouse or minor children is discriminatory against mixed bloods, most of whom are elderly.

U.S. District Judge Bruce Jenkins has called the dispute over hunting and fishing rights, "the closet thing to a domestic-relations quarrel I've seen.

One-Car Rollover Kills Lehi Teen

Special to The Tribune

ALPINE, Utah County — A Lehi teen-ager was killed Tuesday evening when the car in which she was riding rolled on the frontage road adjacent to I-15 near Alpine.

The Utah Highway Patrol identified the victim as Melissa Fox, 15.

A UHP dispatcher said the victim was a passenger in a vehicle driven by her 16-year-old sister, Heidi.

The vehicle was southbound on the frontage road when the driver apparently lost control and the vehicle rolled four times, going through the right-of-way fence between I-15 and the frontage road. The accident occurred at 8:08 p.m.
